Being ourselves international migrants, tangled mobilities are part and parcel of our lived experiences. These mobilities created opportunities that made our paths cross for the first time in 2018. Specifically, the joint research initiatives between the Université libre de Bruxelles (ULB) and Waseda University have provided us with an encouraging environment in which to engage in a long-term research collaboration. The present edited volume is one outcome of this intellectual enterprise that would not have been possible without the support of different people, centers, and institutions.

We are grateful to Nobue Suzuki (professor of anthropology at Chiba University) who put us in contact with each other in 2017, and to Jean-Louis Moortgat (head of the Waseda University Brussels Office—WBO in the ULB) who has been providing us with ideas, opportunities, and assistance to attain the objectives of our collaboration. Our sincere thanks go to Vanessa Frangville and Frederik Ponjaert of the East Asian Studies (EASt) research center in ULB for their suggestions, encouragement, and support. We appreciate the help of Laura Merla, professor of sociology and our colleague at the Catholic University of Louvain (UCLouvain), who co-organized with us the international workshop “Intimacy, sexuality and family in the process of migration: European/Asian experiences compared” on 18–19 December 2018 at ULB. This workshop led to our efforts to compose this volume. The support of Geneviève Corbisier, secretary of the Laboratory of Anthropology of Contemporary Worlds (LAMC), and the assistance of four master students from ULB (Miriam Diallo, Catherine Gonzalez Alvarez, Nicolas Jacqmin, and Clara Zeltner-Reig) were key to the organizational success of this event.

Aside from a grant from F.R.S.-FNRS (the Belgian national fund for scientific research), the workshop received assistance from the WBO and from the Maison des Sciences humaines (MSH) of ULB with the joint support of EASt and of the Interdisciplinary Research Structure on Gender (STRIGES, headed by David Paternotte). The workshop was also sponsored by the Institute of Asian Migrations (IAM) of Waseda University, the Interdisciplinary Research Center on Families and Sexualities (CIRFASE) at the UCLouvain, and the LAMC of ULB. Our collaboration would not have led to interesting exchanges without the following grants: “Waseda-In International Chair” in April 2018, “Subsidy for the Organization of a Scientific Event” from the F.R.S.-FNRS (co-applied for with Laura Merla) in September 2018, and “Impulsion OUT Privilege Partnership Subsidy” from ULB in September 2019.

We offer our heartfelt gratitude to all the authors who have contributed to this volume, and thank them for their patience and active interest in this project, despite the challenges we encountered due to the COVID-19 pandemic. We thank Tony Mason, Tom Bonnington, Amanda Horn, Sulaiman Ahmad, and Caroline Kultz from Berghahn Books for their support and faith in this publication project.

Finally, we thank our respective families for their understanding and for continuously inspiring us. Jean-François Flot, a biologist, shared with us the fascinating phenomena of biological and ecological entanglements; and James Farrer, a fellow sociologist, contributed an innovative conceptual framework in our volume building on his long ethnographic experience in China. Our intellectual adventures would also have been lonely without the laughs and distractions of our children, whose lives are so intimately tangled with ours.
