My greatest and most immediate debt is to the British Academy and Leverhulme Trust, whose award of a Senior Research Fellowship for the 2001–2 academic year enabled me to write this book. I began some early work on the book while a Visiting Fellow in the Department of Anthropology of the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies at the Australian National University, during the northern summer of 1994. Members of the social anthropology seminar there and at Queen's University, Belfast, Manchester University, the London School of Economics, and L.S.B. College, Dublin (now Dublin Business School), as well as my colleagues at the University of Ulster – particularly Nick Dodge, Max Koch, Joe McCormack and Andrew Sanders – have all given helpful comments on the papers which helped form some of chapters of this book. Glenn Bowman called my attention to the works of Girard and to Freud's writings on the narcissism of minor differences, Richard Ekins gave me bibliographical assistance on the works of Freud and Dominic Bryan drew to my notice the case of St Patrick. I thank Dr Rosanne Cecil for preparing the index. Finally, I would like to thank the journals Anthropology Today, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute and Social Anthropology, for allowing me to use materials from articles I have published with them.
