

---

Notes on Contributors

JANET E. BENSON is an associate professor of anthropology in the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Social Work at Kansas State University. She is past president of the Committee on Refugees and Immigrants (CORI) of the American Anthropological Association. Her research focuses on meatpacking and immigration in southwest Kansas.

KARLA CASER teaches in the Architecture and Urbanism Studio at Faculdade Nacional (FINAC) and at Centro Federal de Educação Tecnológica do Espírito Santo (CEFETES), both located in Vitória, Brazil. She is a professional architect and urbanist and the principal of her own firm. Her research focuses on the use of sustainable building technologies and on human-environment relationships in design practice.

SNJEŽANA ČOLIC is a research associate in the Institute of Social Sciences “Ivo Pilar” in Zagreb, Croatia, and an associate professor in the sociology of culture at the Center for Croatian Studies, University of Zagreb. Her research focuses on localization, globalization, and the role of social and cultural capital in Croatian development.

PAULO DA CUNHA LANA is an associate professor and head of the Postgraduate Program in Environment and Development (UNESCO Chair on Sustainable Development) of the Universidade Federal do Paraná, Brazil. His research focuses on coastal ecosystems, sustainable development, and biodiversity in Brazil.

ANGELA DUARTE D. FERREIRA is a professor in the Postgraduate Programs in Environment and Development and in sociology at the Universidade Federal do Paraná, Brazil. Her research focuses on rural sociology, agriculture and development, and agrarian reform.

JOHANNA GIBSON is a lecturer in intellectual property law, Queen Mary Intellectual Property Research Institute, within the Centre for Commercial Law Studies, University of London. She is project director of “Patenting Lives,” an international network examining cultural and socioeconomic aspects of patents on life forms. Her research focuses on international property and development, traditional knowledge, community governance, and cultural diversity.

KRISTA HARPER is an assistant professor in the Department of Anthropology and the Center for Public Policy and Administration (CPPA) at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. She received a European Union Affairs Research Fellowship through the Fulbright Scholar Program to study ethnicity and Roma civil rights. Her research focuses on social movements and the politics of environment and health.

CARL A. MAIDA is a professor of public health at the University of California, Los Angeles. He is president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Pacific Division. His research focuses on health and the environment in immigrant communities, ethnic cultural dimensions of HIV care, within the UCLA AIDS Institute, and natural hazards, within the National Center for Child Traumatic Stress at the David Geffen School of Medicine.

BARBARA YABLON Maida teaches in the Department of Geography at the University of California, Los Angeles. Her research focuses on medical topologies, with emphasis on the North American agricultural frontier and its relationship to the contemporary reemergence of arboviruses within the irrigated California Central Valley.

KENNETH A. METER is principal at the Crossroads Resource Center in Minneapolis and teaches in the Department of Applied Economics at the University of Minnesota. He serves as technical consultant for the City of Minneapolis Sustainability Initiative.

DARIO NOVELLINO is an honorary research fellow at the University of Kent at Canterbury, UK. He is a visiting research associate of the Institute of Philippine Culture of the Ateneo de Manila University and has carried out studies for the International Fund for Agricultural Development of the United Nations in Indonesia and Vietnam. His research focuses on ethnobotany, natural resource management, conservation, and indigenous rights.

DEBORAH PELLOW is a professor in the Department of Anthropology at Syracuse University and is co-director of the Space and Place Initiative in the Global Affairs Institute at the Maxwell School. She was a Fulbright Teaching Fellow at Osaka University and Ritsumeikan University in Japan. Her research focuses on urban spatial forms, social organization, and community life in West Africa.

CLAUDE RAYNAUT is a research director at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (France), a professor at the Université de Bordeaux 2, and an associate professor at the Universidade Federal do Paraná, Brazil. His research in several African countries and in Brazil has focused on the interactions between local populations and their natural habitat, poverty and child health, and social dimensions of the AIDS epidemic.

THOMAS F. THORNTON is a visiting associate professor of anthropology at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. His research focuses on Tlingit and Alaska Native history, geography, and subsistence issues.

RICHARD WESTRA is an assistant professor in the Division of International and Area Studies, Pukyong National University, Pusan, South Korea. His research focuses on the political economy of South Korean development, Marxist theory and social change, and globalization and the state.

MAGDA ZANONI is a professor at the Universidade Federal do Paraná, Brazil, a professor in the Postgraduate Program in Rural Development at Université Fédérale du Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, and a lecturer at the Université Paris 7 – Denis Diderot. Her research focuses on environment and development, society-nature relations, and biodiversity conservation in Brazil and rural France.