

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Chapter 1. Local Conflict between Interest and Identity: an Introduction	1
1. Nimbyism or Social Movements? How to Explain Protest Campaigns	2
1.1. The Local Dimension	2
1.2. Social Movements and Environmentalism	4
1.3. Resources and Mobilisation	7
1.4. The Political Dimension of the Conflict	9
1.5. Our Research	11
2. Campaigns and Networks: Two Periodisations	13
2.1. The Protest Campaign in Val di Susa	13
2.2. The No Bridge Campaign	22
Chapter 2. Networks and Cross-fertilisation: the Resources of the Protest	31
1. Networks and Cross-fertilisation: an Introduction	31
2. The Role of Local Institutions	34
3. The Role of Environmental Associations	37
4. The Role of Citizens' Committees and the Organisation from Below	40
5. Squatted Social Centres	43
6. Trade Unions and Workers	46
7. Deciding in the Network	49
8. Concluding Remarks	53
Chapter 3. Protest and Identity: the Symbolic Construction of Conflict	57
1. Protest and Identity: an Introduction	57
2. Framing the Identity: Between Localism and Community	58
3. Diagnosis and Prognosis: What Progress?	62
4. Motivational Frames: the Rights of the Community, Mobilisation of the People	70
5. Concluding Remarks	76

Chapter 4. In Movement: the Repertoires of the Protest	79
1. Repertoires of Protest: an Introduction	79
2. The Construction of Knowledge	81
3. Protests and the Logic of Numbers	86
4. Direct Action and Solidarity	88
5. Protest as an Arena: Site Occupations and Camps	92
6. Multiform Action	96
7. Protest and Communication	99
8. Concluding Remarks	101
Chapter 5: Voices of the Valley, Voices of the Straits: a Conclusion	106
Bibliography	115
Index	126