

CONTENTS

List of Plates	vii
Preface	ix
1 Towards a Cultural History of Abortion	1
Historical perspectives	8
Cultures of abortion in Weimar Germany	19
2 Cultural Representation: Abortion on Stage, Screen and in Fiction	26
Abortion in the movies	31
The novel Gilgi and the female reader and spectator	40
Socialist plays and novels	42
Abortion pathologized	53
3 Medical Termination of Pregnancy: Theory and Practice	64
The case of Dr Hartmann	67
Abortion in the medical discourse	70
Divided opinion within the medical profession	71
Medical blunders and legal practice	76
The case of Dr Hope Bridges Adams Lehmann	79
Financial considerations	85
Medical attitude and medical power	87
Women's experience	90
4 Abortion in the Marketplace: Lay Practitioners and Doctors Compete	94
The anti-quackery campaign	94
Self-induced abortions	99
Lay abortionists	102
Gender and the abortionist	105
The careers of 'wise women'	111
The safety record of quack abortionists	114

Methods and money	123
Class differences and shared culture	125
5 Women's Own Voices: Female Perceptions of Abortion	127
The construction of the criminal in abortion trials	130
The experience of abortion	136
'Blocked menses' (Blutstockung) as a popular lay concept	148
Advertising abortifacients	151
Women's sensory perceptions	154
6 Abortion as an Everyday Experience in Village Life: A Case Study from Hesse	163
Rural communities in decline	167
Female communication networks	174
Reproductive Eigensinn	179
Rebellious women and men	181
Relations between the sexes	186
The career of a successful abortionist	192
Denunciation	195
Conclusions	199
7 Abortion in Early Twentieth-century Germany: Continuity and Change	201
Gender roles and gender relations	203
The blurring of boundaries	209
Continuity and change	214
Abortion in Nazi Germany	216
Continuity with Imperial Germany	223
Abbreviations	227
Notes	228
Bibliography	260
Index	279