CEDLA Latin America Studies
CEDLA Latin America Studies

Editorial Board

Professor Dr. Michiel Baud (Chair), CEDLA, Amsterdam, The Netherlands
Professor Anthony Bebbington, Clark University, USA
Dr. Edward F. Fischer, Vanderbilt University, USA
Dr. Anthony L. Hall, London School of Economics, United Kingdom
Dr. Barbara Hogenboom, CEDLA, Amsterdam, The Netherlands
Dr. Barbara Potthast, University of Cologne, Germany
Dr. Rachel Sieder, School of Advanced Study, University of London, UK
Professor G. Eduardo Silva, Tulane University, USA
Professor Dr. Patricio Silva, Leiden University, The Netherlands

Published in Association with the Centre for Latin American Research and Documentation (CEDLA), Amsterdam

CEDLA is an inter-university centre for research and documentation on Latin America located in Amsterdam whose series represents the results of original research on Latin America in the field of the Social Sciences, understood in a broad sense to include History, Economics and Geography.
This volume assesses how China's rise, one of the most important recent changes in the global economy, is affecting Latin America's national politics, political economy and regional and international relations. China's new role in international politics has been helpful to many leftist governments' efforts in Latin America to end the Washington Consensus. The contributors to this thought provoking volume examine these and the other causes, effects and prospects of Latin America's experiences with China's global expansion from a South — South perspective.

Alex E. Fernández Jilberto was Senior Lecturer in International Relations at the University of Amsterdam until his death in 2010. Barbara Hogenboom is Senior Lecturer in Political Science at the Centre for Latin American Research and Documentation (CEDLA) in Amsterdam.

Available, 224 pages, 15 ills, 23 tables bibliog., index
ISBN 978-1-84545-739-6 Hardback $75.00/£44.00

This book examines the politics surrounding regional cuisine, as the author argues that Yucatecan gastronomy has been created and promoted in an effort to affirm the identity of a regional people and to oppose the hegemonic force of central Mexican cultural icons and forms. Yucatecan gastronomy counters the homogenizing drive of a national cuisine based on dominant central Mexican appetencies and defies the image of Mexican national cuisine as rooted in indigenous traditions. Drawing on post-structural and postcolonial theory, the author proposes that Yucatecan gastronomy is a bifurcation from regional culinary practices. However, the author warns, this leads to a double, paradoxical situation that divides the nation: while a national cuisine attempts to silence regional cultural diversity, the fissures in the project of a homogeneous regional identity are revealed.

Steffan Igor Ayora-Diaz is Professor of Anthropology at the Facultad de Ciencias Antropológicas, U. Autónoma de Yucatán.

Available, 344 pages, 15 ills, 1 map, bibliog., index
ISBN 978-0-85745-220-7 Hardback $95.00/£57.00

"[The] inclusion of two contrasting population groups in two cities makes it an ambitious and challenging project, which in less competent hands could be problematic. But it is this breadth combined with depth which really gives the study its authority. The focus on intermediate cities is refreshing and the exploration of global networks and influences through international migration offers new insights and makes an important and contemporary contribution to the literature. This is outstanding interdisciplinary scholarship and ethnography at its best... a valuable addition to the literature on housing, poverty, urban studies and city planning as well as to the study of popular aesthetics, architecture, urban anthropology, and sociology."

Peter Kellett, University of Newcastle upon Tyne

Christien Klaufus holds a Masters degree in Architecture and a PhD in Cultural Anthropology. Her research focuses on urban development, housing, architecture, and material culture.

Available, 330 pages, 42 figs, 13 tables, 5 maps, bibliog., index
ISBN 978-0-85745-371-6 Hardback $95.00/£60.00
ENVIRONMENT AND CITIZENSHIP IN LATIN AMERICA
Natures, Subjects and Struggles
Edited by Alex Latta and Hannah Wittman

“This book is a major contribution to our understanding of environmental politics in Latin America. The chapters present a wealth of original research that shows that environmental concerns are part of the daily life of indigenous populations and other grassroots groups. The theoretical frame of environmental citizenship provides a compelling way for thinking about how their environmental demands are closely linked to their national identity, political participation, land and resources.”

Kathryn Hochstetler, University of Waterloo

Scholarship related to environmental questions in Latin America has only recently begun to coalesce around citizenship as both an empirical site of inquiry and an analytical frame of reference. This has led to a series of new insights and perspectives, but few efforts have been made to bring these various approaches into a sustained conversation across different social, temporal, and geographic contexts. This volume is the result of a collaborative endeavor to advance debates on environmental citizenship, while simultaneously and systematically addressing broader theoretical and methodological questions related to the particularities of studying environment and citizenship in Latin America. Providing a window onto leading scholarship in the field, the book also sets an ambitious agenda to spark further research.

Alex Latta is an Associate Professor in the Department of Global Studies at Wilfrid Laurier University and in the Balsillie School of International Affairs. Hannah Wittman is an Assistant Professor of Sociology and Associate Member of the Latin American Studies Program at Simon Fraser University.

July 2012, 260 pages, 1 table, 2 ills, bibliog., index
ISBN 978-0-85745-747-9 Hardback $70.00/£43.00
Institutional E-ISBN 978-0-85745-748-6

CENTRAL AMERICA IN THE NEW MILLENNIUM
Living Transition and Reimagining Democracy
Edited by Jennifer L. Burrell and Ellen Moodie

“As recent events in Honduras and the increasing incursion of drug wars on American life attest, the relationship between the United States and Central America is far from over. This book fills a much needed gap in the literature by addressing the complex presents and futures of Central America, its blurred relationship with the US and the complex intra-regional difference. It is an ambitious text in its privileging of the ethnographic gaze so as to provide a regional vision.”

M. Gabriela Torres, Wheaton College

“A very rich and timely collection on contemporary Central America [that] situates local worlds of Central American citizens within the broader framework of key global challenges such as neoliberalism, globalization and democratization. In doing so it makes a critical contribution to contemporary studies of political transition more generally and those of Latin America more specifically. It unites a fascinating range of chapters in this timely and thoughtful collection.”

Mo Hume, University of Glasgow

Jennifer L. Burrell teaches anthropology at the University at Albany, SUNY. Ellen Moodie is Associate Professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Illinois.

October 2012, 324 pages, 23 ills, 5 tables, 2 maps, bibliog., index
ISBN 978-0-85745-752-3 Hardcover $95.00/£60.00
Institutional E-ISBN 978-0-85745-753-0