Anthropology's Ancestors

Zora Neale Hurston

Ana Gretel Echazú Böschmeier and
Peti Mama Gomes
Foreword by Kimberley D. McKinson

Exploring Zora Neale Hurston's life and work through a decolonial lens, this book traces Hurston's journey from her early life (1891-1919) and struggles at the margins (1920-1930) to her peak as a pioneering ethnographer and writer (1931-1956) and her later years (1957-1960). Examining her navigation of a hostile academic environment, it highlights her redefinition of Black autonomy and diasporic identity, and underscores Hurston's enduring influence on Anthropology and contemporary Black thought.

"This book offers an insightful and innovative approach to Hurston's oeuvre. By applying a transatlantic and decolonial reflexivity, it sheds new light on Hurston's work through a Black feminist lens from the Global South."

Jane Ellen Harrison

Robert Stroup

Jane Ellen Harrison transformed the study of Greek religion with her discovery of a religious system predating that of the Olympic gods and goddesses familiar to the modern world. This biography introduces her work and ideas, which have influenced and profoundly shaped scholarship, primarily in the classics, throughout the last century.

Explanations in the Social Sciences

The Origins of Prejudice

Dangerous Opinions and Beliefs

Eugene Anderson, Kelley Coures, Carla Guerrón Montero, Tory L. Schendel-Vyvoda, Tobias Schwörer and John Edward Terrell

The Origins of Prejudice is a short and unconventional book that shows you step-by-step both how and why all of us who are human often rely uncritically on what we believe to be true. The book directly addresses prejudice, discrimination, and harmful beliefs, asking why humans develop biased views about others and how these attitudes shape social conflict. It is highly relevant to contemporary debates about racism, polarization, and misinformation that are particularly pressing in today's divided political landscape.

Edible People

The Historical Consumption of Slaves and Foreigners and the Cannibalistic Trade in Human Flesh

Christian Siefkes

"This is a terrific piece of eye-opening research which illuminates a horrible but true part of human nature. It is wide ranging – covering many different cultures, peoples and places – and will fascinate any historian or anthropologist. For the general reader, it offers many vivid accounts of what seems inexplicable behaviour which was once far more common than anyone would have thought." • Jasper Becker, author of Hungry Ghosts: Mao's Secret Famine

Terrorism in Question

Decolonizing Anthropology and the Study of Islam

Irfan Ahmad

Terrorism in Question crafts a political anthropology of post-9/11 "new terrorism" by investigating who needs the category of terrorists and offering a global framework to understand anthropology, Islam and terrorism. In contrast to their depiction as antimodern, barbarian and fanatic, this study theorizes "Muslim terrorists" as radical friends of equality and visionaries of an unrecognized ethical politics.

Pierre Fatumbi Verger

From Detached Look to Knowledge through Initiation

Jérôme Souty

A maverick photographer who travelled the world in search of otherness, over time Verger became a prominent ethnographer, botanist and historian. This book is an anthropological essay, but also a cross-cultural portrait and the story of an extraordinary life. It provides a detailed analysis of the artistic and scientific work of Pierre Fatumbi Verger (1902-1996).

Cesare Lombroso's Legacy in Latin America

How His Controversial Popularity as a Criminologist Remains

Livio Sansone

Cesare Lombroso is considered the founder of criminology with his theory of distinguishing criminals from noncriminal by physical oddities. This book argues that the study of ethnography in Latin America should give more attention to the Lombroso school and the academic exchange between relatively marginal national anthropologies, such as the Italian and Latin American schools.

The Unsettled Clock

The Persistence of Time Pluralism

Kevin Birth

The history of timekeeping has always involved choosing or converting between various ways of representing time, a phenomenon called time pluralism. The Unsettled Clock: The Persistence of Time Pluralism explores time pluralism by documenting historical cases and examining its persistence in present. This analysis offers a political and historical look into how timekeeping has been shaped, challenged, and manipulated.

Frontiers of Appropriation

Spanish High-Speed Rail and Capitalist Environment-Making

Natalia Buier

Frontiers of Appropriation delves into the history of Europe's most advanced high-speed rail system to assess the transformations it has brought about.

"This book has upended my view of high-speed rail. Its analysis of HSR in Spain, the world's second longest network, reveals why this colossal undertaking failed to alter the dominant mobility paradigm. Along the way, we learn richly from Buier's observations on capital as an environment making-force." • Gareth Dale, Brunel University

Europe's Disappearing Waste

Unanticipated Conflicts between Removal and Greening

Daniel Sosna

Through ethnographic research conducted among landfill workers and waste pickers, Europe's Disappearing Waste explores the inner workings of the Czech waste management system that is underpinned by the belief that waste should disappear. The normative assumptions about market-based solutions and techno-optimism in waste management are called into question, directing attention to the commitment to salvage that provides an alternative way of relating to waste.

Crafting Co-ops in Denmark

Reworking Craftmanship, Construction and Capitalism in a Cooperative Realm

Maia Ebsen

This book explores the revival of cooperative craftwork in Denmark, delving into construction sites and political assemblies to reveal the dreams, drives, and desires of a diverse group of builders working in a Copenhagen-based craft co-op. It sheds light on the political capacities of cooperative craftwork and on cooperative practitioners' complicated relation to capitalist practices; practices which they simultaneously refuse, ridicule, and reproduce.

Ritual, Rapture and Rebellion

The Making of Market, Mercy and Meaning Amongst the Gitanos of El Rastro

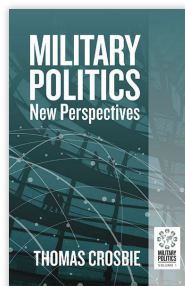

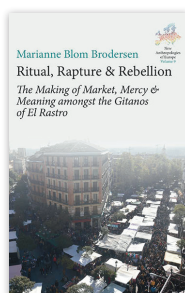

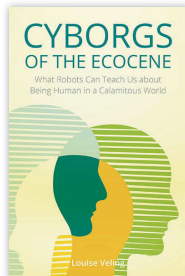

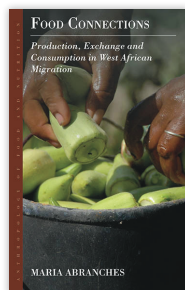

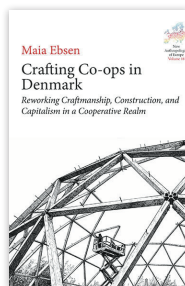

Marianne Blom Brodersen

The Gitanos of el Rastro carry an 'ontology of simultaneity' as self-employed traders and Pentecostal practitioners in Madrid. This makes the Spanish Romani be considered as both a part of and apart from mainstream society. This book is an anthropological account of a group of middle and upper-class Gitanos and their ways of creating a 'society within society' based upon distinct cultural, moral and ideological values, notions and practices.

Migration and Health

Challenging the Borders of Belonging, Care, and Policy

Edited by Nadia El-Shaarawi and Stéphanie Larchanché
Foreword by Catherine Panter-Brick, Afterword by Heide Castañeda

Despite the centrality of migration in our contemporary world, scholarship on mobility and health frequently separates migrants according to legal status, country of origin, destination, or health concern. Yet people on the move face challenges and opportunities that transcend these boundaries, including border fortification, neoliberal agendas, and climate change. This volume explores these epistemic borders, recognizing the necessity of a new conversation about migration and health.

The Subject of Sovereignty

Relationality and the Pivot Past Liberalism

Gregory Feldman

Exploring the themes of nature, race, and the divine, this book identifies the more realistic alternative in the "relational subject": a subject that is inseparable from the global field of relations through which it emerges and yet distinct from that field because it lives a life that no one else ever has. Recognizing ourselves as such subjects allows us not only to rethink politics, but to envision sovereignty as the means by which we each rejuvenate ourselves and the politics we constitute with others.

Bodies, Gods and Other Imponderables

Cross-Cultural Metalogues

Geoffrey Lloyd and Aparecida Vilaça

Through a dialogue between a philosopher and an anthropologist, one a specialist in ancient Greek and Chinese thought, the other in Amazonian Indigenous peoples, Geoffrey Lloyd and Aparecida Vilaça revise our understanding of beliefs and behaviours considered counter-intuitive in the Western world. These include ideas about the body and its antitheses, dreams, sickness, gods and the narratives and myths which are used to untangle these concepts.

Inplacement

Global Outbreaks and the Anthropology of Isolation

Edited by Susanna M. Hoffman and Virginia García-Acosta

This book highlights the need to study individuals alongside customary groups, to examine persons sequestered within their socio-cultural contexts amid changing global circumstances, and to reflect on one's own society. Drawing on the Covid-19 lockdown, Contributors discuss their own experiences of in-placement. The volume also considers how epidemics qualify as disasters within the risk field and asks whether certain long-established postulations may now be outdated.

Rebel Valley

Territorio, Infraestructura and Resistance in Alpine Italy

Mateusz Laszczkowski

Based in the Valsusa, a valley in the western Italian Alps bordering France, the No TAV movement has opposed the construction of a transborder high-speed railway for over thirty years. As the largest and longest-running of Italy's lotte territoriali (territorial struggles), it offers a sustained example of place-based resistance. Bringing together the anthropology of resistance and infrastructure with political theory and geography, this book situates the movement alongside similar struggles across Europe and beyond.

On the Origin of Tourist Experiences

A Historical, Phenomenological Perspective on Travel Stories

Jaap Lengkeek

Travel narratives have been recorded since the invention of writing, surviving as myths, epics, official records, diaries, and personal accounts. Despite this long history, their significance remains largely absent from contemporary studies of travel and tourism. Bringing together philosophical, historical, and anthropological perspectives, this book examines what these narratives reveal about the nature of travel experience.

Occupied Istanbul

Urban Politics, Culture and Society, 1918-1923

Edited by Yaşar Tolga Cora, Daniel-Joseph MacArthur-Seal and Gizem Tongu

More than a century has passed since the arrival of British, French, and Italian forces in Istanbul in 1918, marking the defeat of the Ottoman Empire in the First World War. The almost five-year-long occupation of the city that followed remains largely ignored in history writing in the former occupying powers, and is often marginalised in Anatolia-centric narratives of the Turkish War of Independence. The book brings together many of the scholars working to redress this neglect in recent years.

Political Friendship

Liberal Notables, Networks, and the Pursuit of the German Nation State, 1848-1866

Michael Weaver

Political Friendship approaches 19th century German history's trajectory to unification through the lens of academics, journalists, and artists who formed close personal relationships with one another and with powerful state leaders. Michael Weaver argues that German liberals thought with their friends by demonstrating the previously neglected aspects of political friendship were central to German political culture.

Concepts of Culture

New Directions in Conceptual History

Edited by Mattias Pirholt and Michael Lipkin

Offering an interdisciplinary approach to conceptual history, Concepts of Culture broadens its scope through a series of experimental case studies in 'applied conceptual history'. Bringing together Contributors from a variety of disciplines—including art history, comparative literature, cultural studies, German studies, and history—it offers a range of theoretically reflected applications of conceptual history that focus on the cultural concepts, and thereby contribute to the methodological development of these particular fields of research.

Business as Usual

The Germans and Their Law, 1943 to 1948

Benjamin Lahusen
Translated from the German

Drawing on extensive archival records, Business as Usual shows how the legal system in Germany continued to operate with the same personnel, administrative routines, and institutional habits between 1943 and 1948, despite violence, mass murder, bombings, and regime change. By tracing everyday judicial work in extraordinary circumstances, it reveals how legal institutions endure, adapt, and serve an inestimable purpose even in moments of profound upheaval.

Reading Hitler's Victims

Refugee Memoirs of Nazi Persecution for British Readers during Appeasement and War

Ellen Pilsworth

Reading Hitler's Victims is the first study to explore the personal memoirs that were for British readers by refugees from Nazi persecution, both before and during the war. By asking whose memoirs were, and why and how they were shaped by translators and editors, this study reveals the changing victim tropes that took centre stage in the British imagination of Nazism between 1933 and 1945.

Citizens of the Enemy

Samuel Huston Goodfellow

Samuel Huston Goodfellow examines the transnational spread of Nazism from Germany to Southwest Africa, where former colonists sought to preserve German culture and reclaim influence. By embracing Nazi organizations, they built a movement that peaked in 1939, before the South African administration began to intern Germans at the start of the war.

Audiences of Nazism

Using Media in the Third Reich

Edited by Ulrike Weckel
 Afterword by Jane Caplan

"Given the significance of ideological penetration for explaining the Third Reich, it should make essential reading not just for specialists of Nazi media and propaganda. The individual chapters are succinct and focused but feel accessible to readers unfamiliar with their topics."

Yugoslavia without Yugoslavs

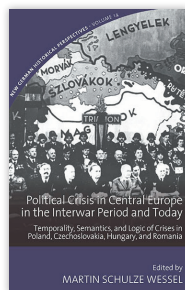

The History of a National Idea

Božidar Jezernik

Translated from the Serbian by Božidar Jezernik, Lucy Stevens, and Vuk Sečerović

With ongoing conflicts and disparate forms of nationalism in and around historical Yugoslavia as its backdrop, Yugoslavia without Yugoslavs for the first time addresses the history and idea of a united Yugoslavia in and during which a true "Yugoslav" identity never really came into being.

Pepsi and the Pill

Motherhood, Politics and Film in Britain and France, 1958-1969

Melissa Oliver-Powell

"This elegantly written and extensively researched book thoughtfully dissects cultural and political framings of motherhood in 1960s' British and French film... Faced with the current precarity of reproductive justice around the world and the undermining of LGBTQ+ rights, this is an important and extremely timely book." • H-Soz-Kult

The Body Swap Film

Edited by Wyatt Moss-Wellington and Kim Wilkins

"A welcome, timely, and wide-ranging collection of essays on the body swap film. The volume is well-researched and considers films not only from Hollywood, where the body swap trope is principally derived, but in other global cinemas. This is a well-written, engaging and interdisciplinary account of the body swap film." • Frances Smith, University of Sussex

Museum Studies

New in Paperback! Emerging Technologies and Museums Mediating Difficult Heritage

Edited by Theopisti Stylianou-Lambert, Alexandra Bounia, and Antigone Heraclidou

Emerging technologies in museums have the potential to reveal unheard or silenced stories, challenge preconceptions, encourage emotional responses, introduce the unexpected, and overall provide alternative experiences. By examining varied theoretical approaches and case studies, authors demonstrate how "awkward", contested, and rarely discussed subjects and stories are treated – or can be potentially treated – in a museum setting with the use of the latest technology.

The Spirit of Affect Song-Dance Encounters in Matrilineal Congo

Carine L. Plancke

In rural Punu communities, song and dance are profoundly relational and affective practices, generated ever anew through ritual encounters among humans and with more-than-human beings. In this ethnography, the author immerses the reader into the rhythms of resonance, attunement and amplification that intensify the performances and open pathways to participation into the water spirit world.

Sliding Worlds Reflections on the Taipei Dance Circle

Yu-Chun Chen

Famous for its 'Modern Dance on Baby Oil', the Taipei Dance Circle (1984–2019) changed how we think about movements. This book captures a rare behind-the-scenes look in dance ethnography at the group's final experimental years (2014–2017) after losing their founder, Shaw-Lu Liu.
