Making a Difference? Social Assessment Policy and Praxis and its Emergence in China
Edited by Susanna Price and Kathryn Robinson

"...an excellent collection of essays and case studies offering both a critical and nuanced look at how projects are produced from a practitioner’s perspective." - Barbara Rose Johnston, Environment, Health and Human Rights, Center for Political Ecology

This collection of essays locates recent Chinese experience with development in a historical and comparative perspective. Contributors - social scientists employed by international development banks, national government agencies, and sub-contracting groups - use real-life experience to examine development policies from a practitioner’s perspective.

Susanna Price is a Research Associate in the College of Asia and the Pacific at the Australian National University.

Kathryn Robinson is Professor in Anthropology at the Australian National University, in the School of Culture, History & Language, College of Asia and the Pacific.

Japanese Tourism: Spaces, Places and Structures
Carolin Funck and Malcolm Cooper

“The volume’s scope suggests how daunting the editors’ task was, and they do a credible job, addressing issues ranging from governmental policy to heritage tourism to the possibilities of virtual tourism in the 21st century. This is a good introduction to the subject... what the authors do accomplish is significant, particularly for comparative tourism studies...Highly recommended.” - Choice

The changing patterns of Japanese tourism and the views of the Japanese tourist since the Meiji Restoration, in 1868, are given an in-depth historical, geographical, economic and social analysis in this book. As well as providing a case study for the purpose of investigating the changing face of global tourism from the 19th to the 21st Century, this account of Japanese tourism explores both domestic social relations and international geographical, political and economic relations, especially in the northeast Asian context.

Carolin Funck is Associate Professor in Human Geography at Hiroshima University (Japan) Graduate School of Integrated Arts and Sciences.

Malcolm Cooper was Vice-President, Research and International Cooperation until 2011 at Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University, Beppu, Japan.

Ecological Migrants
Reindeer Herders
Yuanyuan Xie

This landmark study of a community of sedentarized Ewenki reindeer herders living in Inner Mongolia... is at once deeply sympathetic and penetratingly astute from a scholarly point of view. Rich in detail about the group’s tumultuous historical experiences over the past century, the narrative weaves together multiple threads from traditional Ewenki forest culture with the challenges posed by adaptation to settled life. This book will doubtless capture the interest of both anthropologists and social historians, as the need to scientifically evaluate the effects of analogous ecological migrations in other areas of the globe becomes more urgent...Highly recommended.” - Choice

This ethnography details changing Ewenki ways of life brought first by China’s recent ecological migration policies, which aim to preserve and restore the badly damaged ecologies of western China. This ethnography examines these policies and their effects on Aoluguya Ewenki hunters, who have been relocated.

Yuanyuan Xie is Lecturer in the Department of Sociology, China Agricultural University.

Dislocations Series

Indigenist Mobilization: Confronting Electoral Communism and Precarious Livelihoods in Post-Reform Kerala
Luisa Steur

This is a wonderfully written piece that will raise some eyebrows and generate some wonderful debates. The critique of indigenist “identity” politics has been sorely needed for a long time, and this work helps us assess that context in a more robust and critical fashion without falling into a lackluster, celebratory mode of championing indigenous politics on a pure level of ‘identity and rights’.

Luisa Steur is Assistant Professor at the Department of Anthropology, University of Amsterdam.

Communities of Complicity: Everyday Ethics in Rural China
Hans Steinmüller

“Steinmüller’s Communities of Complicity is a fascinating and vivid ethnography which examines the ethical reflexivity of the everyday lives of ordinary people in rural China... and provides a rich and nuanced account of the rapid social change faced by villagers... Overall, this is a book that is both empirically rich and theoretically interesting.”

Hans Steinmüller is Lecturer in the Department of Anthropology and convenor of the MSc China in Comparative Perspective at the London School of Economics.

Where Are All Our Sheep?
Kygzystan, A Global Political Arena
Boris Petric
Translated from the French by Cynthia Schoch

“This is the best book to date on post-Soviet Kyrgyzstan. It combines personal observations with careful, critical analysis. The style is at times humorous and conversational, creating the impression at first glance that it might be a somewhat superficial account of the region. In fact, however, it is an extraordinarily perceptive analysis of the process of transition and re-adjustment in a highly complex society.”

Boris Petric is a Social Anthropologist and a Senior Researcher at the CNRS in Marseilles.

Leaving Footprints in the Taiga
Luck, Spirits and Ambivalence among the Siberian Orochen Reindeer Herders and Hunters
Donatas Brandišauskas

“The ethnographic material and the theoretical argument makes the book a worthwhile contribution to anthropological knowledge about Siberian hunter/herders specifically and about hunter/herders and indeed all humans who must carve out a living in relation to their natural and supernatural environments—which means all humans—generally.”

Donatas Brandišauskas is Associate Professor and Senior Researcher at Vilnius University in Lithuania.

Grace after Genocide
Cambodians in the United States
Carol A. Mortland

“Nothing really prepared me for the ambition and comprehensiveness of Grace after Genocide. It is hard to imagine that we are going to get a more thorough overview of Cambodians in the US than with Mortland’s book—which addresses not just the broad pattern of how these Cambodians deal with their history, but all the nitty gritty details of refugee agencies, sponsorship, welfare and work, and the ins and outs of community organization.”

John Marston, The College of Mexico

Grace after Genocide is the first comprehensive ethnography of Cambodian refugees, charting their struggle to transition from agrarian life to survival in post-industrial America, while still maintaining their Cambodian identities. The ethnography details how America’s mid-twentieth century involvement in Southeast Asia has had enormous consequences on Khmer refugees and their children.

Carol A. Mortland is a cultural anthropologist who has been conducting research with Cambodian refugees since 1981 in various locations across the United States.

Reclaiming the Forest
The Ewenki Reindeer Herders of Aoluguya
Edited by Åshild Kolås and Yuanyuan Xie
Foreword by F. Georg Heyne

“This edited volume is the first book-length, English-language publication devoted to [the Ewenki] and makes a very welcome addition to the growing ethnographic literature on northern Asia’s indigenous peoples... The book strikes an elegant balance between history, contemporary social commentary, and original narratives by members of the Ewenki community. Highly recommended.”

Choice

The reindeer herders of Aoluguya, China, are a group of former hunters who today see themselves as “keepers of reindeer.” To some, their future seems troubled, but this volume’s literary and academic contributions instead focus on the present, as the Ewenki attempt to reclaim their forest lifestyle and develop new forest livelihoods.

Åshild Kolås is Research Professor at the Peace Research Institute Oslo.

Ogata-Mura
Sowing Dissent and Reclaiming Identity in a Japanese Farming Village
Donald C. Wood

“In his densely detailed, long-term study of Ogata-mura, Wood has taken us a lifetime away from the first studies of Japanese villages carried out by foreigners in the 1930s and 1950s... Wood presents an excellent analysis of the conflict between the view held by some residents that farming is a way of life and the conviction by others that it is a business like any other.”

Asian Anthropology

Based on seventeen years of research, this book explores the process of Ogata-mura’s development from the planning stages to the present. An intensive ethnographic study of the relationship between land reclamation, agriculture, and politics in regional Japan, it traces the internal social effects of the village’s economic transformations while addressing the implications of national policy at the municipal and regional levels.

Donald C. Wood is an Associate Professor at Akita University, where he has worked since earning a PhD in cultural anthropology at the University of Tokyo in 2004.

A Policy Travelogue
Tracing Welfare Reform in Aotearoa/New Zealand and Canada
Catherine Kingfisher

“Kingfisher’s book is a theoretically productive account of how welfare reform policies develop and travel...from the world of policy élites to the daily lives of poor single mothers... An important strength of Kingfisher's book is the range of data she uses from locations that are less discussed in the literature on policy and especially in the literature on welfare reform.”

PoLAR

An ethnography of the development and travel of the New Zealand model of neoliberal welfare reform, this study explores the social life of policy, which is one of process, motion, and change. Different actors, including not only policy élites but also providers and recipients, engage with it in light of their own resources and knowledge.

Catherine Kingfisher is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Lethbridge.

Footprints in Paradise
Ecotourism, Local Knowledge, and Nature Therapies in Okinawa
Andrea E. Murray

“A solid contribution to the anthropology of tourism and to ecotourism studies in general that offers a variety of interesting case examples. This book successfully attempts to reconsider the primacy of the visual in touristic encounters, and to place Okinawa’s current tourism economies in a larger historical context of exploitation and dependency.” · Erve Chambers, University of Maryland

In Okinawa, ecotourism promises to provide employment for a dwindling population of rural youth while preserving the natural environment and bolstering regional pride. Footprints in Paradise explores how sense of place in Okinawa is transformed as language, landscapes, and wildlife are reconstituted as treasured and vulnerable resources.

Andrea E. Murray is an Associate in Research at the Reischauer Institute for Japanese Studies.

Honour and Violence
Gender, Power and Law in Southern Pakistan
Nafisa Shah

“This is an extremely impressive achievement that makes a significant and substantial contribution to the ethnography of Pakistan and to the broader field of legal anthropology.” · Hastings Donnan, Queen’s University of Belfast

This volume explores the implication of modern law in the seemingly ancient cultural practice of kari, which allows male family members to take the lives of female relatives accused of adultery. Drawing connections between local contests over marriage and resources, Nafisa Shah unearths deep historical connections between local contests over marriage and resources, Nafisa Shah unearths deep historical connections between local contests over marriage and resources, Nafisa Shah unearths deep historical connections between local contests over marriage and resources.

Trapped in the Gap
Doing Good in Indigenous Australia
Emma Kowal

“Well written, widely documented and counter-intuitive, Trapped in the Gap is a brilliant book and a significant contribution to the study of aboriginal health, racial relations in post-settler states and cultural recognition in a liberal and multicultural society… It is undoubtedly a must-read book for anyone who seeks to better understand the problems of Indigenous health and racial relations in contemporary Australia.” · Social Anthropology

Trapped in the Gap explores what happens when a group of state-supported, intelligent and well-meaning people attempt to help without harming. This group of “white anti-racists” find themselves trapped by endless ambiguities, contradictions, and double binds, a microcosm of the broader dilemmas of postcolonial societies.

Being and Becoming
Embodiment and Experience among the Orang Rimba of Sumatra
Ramsey Elkholy

“Being and Becoming perfectly represents the present-day anthropological focus on bodies, senses, and the construction of persons (human and otherwise), as well as the replacement of textual emphases with phenomenological ones.” · Anthropology Review Database

“This is the perfect introduction to phenomenological anthropology, brilliantly combining theoretical insight with ethnographic analysis.” · Gillian Evans, Department of Social Anthropology, University of Manchester

In a unique methodological contribution, Ramsey Elkholy adopts a set of body-centered approaches that reflect and capture the day-to-day, moment-to-moment ways in which the hunters and gatherers of Orang Rimba, Sumatra, engage with the world.

Ramsey Elkholy, PhD, University of Manchester, is an entrepreneur, musician, and writer based in New York City.

When Things Become Property
Land Reform, Authority and Value in Postsocialist Europe and Asia
Thomas Sikor, Stefan Dorondel, Johannes Stahl and Phuc Xuan To

“I think this is an excellent book. The command of the empirical material allows the authors to drive home a series of points that have theoretical purchase far beyond the analyzed contexts. This is an exciting contribution to the understanding of major social transformations.”
Christian Lund, University of Copenhagen

When Things Become Property examines postsocialist land and forest reforms in Albania, Romania and Vietnam, finding that property reforms are not miracle tools available to governments for refashioning economies, politics or environments.

Thomas Sikor was Professor of Environment and Development at the University of East Anglia in the United Kingdom.

Stefan Dorondel is Senior Researcher at the Francisc I. Rainer Institute of Anthropology Bucharest.

Johannes Stahl works for a multilateral environmental agreement dealing with trade in endangered species of fauna and flora.

Phuc Xuan To is Research Fellow at Resources, Environment and Development Group of Crawford School of Public Policy, at the Australian National University.

Trees, Knots, and Outriggers
Environmental Knowledge in the Northeast Kula Ring
Frederick H. Damon

“A rare and formidable work. This is a wholly distinctive contribution to multi-species ethnography, of environments made as people tie living materials to one another. It is also a wholly original account of the research process.”
Marilyn Strathern, University of Cambridge

Trees, Knots and Outriggers is the culmination of twenty-five years of work by Frederick H. Damon and his attention to cultural adaptations to the environment in Melanesia.

Frederick H. Damon is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Virginia.

Selfhood and Recognition
Melanesian and Western Accounts to Relationality
Anita Galuschek

“This is a highly original and ambitious book. [The author’s] discussion as a whole is enormously stimulating, and it represents perhaps the most sustained attempt to develop philosophical positions in dialogue with ethnographic data since the 1960s and 1970s.”
Joel Robbins, Trinity College, Cambridge

The disciplines of philosophy and cultural anthropology have one thing in common: human behavior. Yet surprisingly, dialogue between the two fields has remained largely silent until now. Selfhood and Recognition combines philosophical and cultural anthropological accounts of the perception of individual action, exploring the processes through which a person recognizes the self and the other.

Anita C. Galuschek works at the PLACE project of the Heidelberg School of Education where she combines approaches from cultural anthropology, philosophy and pedagogy.

The Legacies of a Hawaiian Generation
From Territorial Subject to American Citizen
Judith Schachter

“Schachter has written a book that models how anthropologists can be responsible and responsive to indigenous people. [It is] massively researched but exceedingly accessible, ethically and methodologically groundbreaking, and yet humble in its ambition and presentation. This book deserves a wide audience, and will appeal to Hawai’i’s specialists, as well as scholars of the Pacific and indigeneity. It is also imminently suited to classroom use, if students are ready for ethnographic detail…[and] will leave its own rich legacy for future generations of scholars.”
Asia Pacific Viewpoint

Through the voices and perspectives of the members of an extended Hawaiian family, or `ohana, this book tells the story of North American imperialism in Hawai`i from the Great Depression to the new millennium.

Judith Schachter is Professor of Anthropology and History at Carnegie Mellon University.

Mimesis and Pacific Transcultural Encounters
Making Likenesses in Time, Trade, and Ritual Reconfigurations
Edited by Jeannette Mageo and Elfriede Hermann

"This edited collection offers an important contribution to mimesis and its role in transcultural encounters, both in the past and present, in the Pacific region." - Alison Dundon, University of Adelaide, Australia

How do images circulating in Pacific cultures and exchanged between them and their many visitors transform meanings for all involved? This fascinating collection explores how through mimesis, wayfarers and locales alike borrow images from one another to expand their cultural repertoire of meanings or borrow images from their own past to validate their identities.

Jeannette Mageo is a psychological anthropologist.

Elfriede Hermann has conducted long-term research with Papua New Guineans, Banabans in Fiji and I-Kiribati.

Mortuary Dialogues
Death Ritual and the Reproduction of Moral Community in Pacific Modernities
Edited by David Lipset and Eric K. Silverman
Foreword by Shirley Lindenbaum

"This book is notable for its wealth of ethnographic data on mortuary practices in very different parts of a changing Pacific, as well as for the critique running through it that reminds us that Hertz's model is an idealization—both emic and etic—from which the actual practice departs into varying degrees of ambivalence." - Roger Lohmann, Trent University

Mortuary Dialogues presents fresh perspectives on death and mourning across the Pacific Islands. Through its set of rich ethnographies, the book examines how funerals and death rituals give rise to discourse and debate about sustaining moral persons and community amid modernity, and its enormous transformations.

David Lipset is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Minnesota.

Eric K. Silverman is Professor of Anthropology in the American Studies and Psychology/Human Development Departments at Wheelock College.

The Death of the Big Men and the Rise of the Big Shots
Custom and Conflict in East New Britain
Keir Martin

"Keir Martin's book is written in an extremely clear and unpretentious language and the reader is never left to wonder what the author is arguing. This does not mean that the arguments or ethnographic cases of the book are simple. On the contrary, Martin's nuanced study of language and exchanges grounded in the solid ethnographic study of the social reality of the inhabitants of Matupit and Sikut shed light on very complex issues." - Suomen Antropologi: Journal of the Finnish Anthropological Society

Through detailed ethnography of the transactions that a displaced people entered into in seeking to rebuild their lives, this book analyses how people re-make sociality in an era of post-colonial neoliberalism without taking either the transformative power of globalization or the resilience of indigenous culture as its starting point.

Keir Martin is Associate Professor in Social Anthropology at the University of Oslo.

Engaging with Strangers
Love and Violence in the Rural Solomon Islands
Debra McDougall

"A thoughtful study of the tradition of migration, mixing, and encountering ‘the other’ on one’s shores—and of being ‘the other’ on someone else’s shores—offers a salutary critique of ‘tribalism’ and ‘descent groups’ in Oceania and a message of empathy for peoples around the world today who are pressed to welcome others or to seek welcome from others.” - Anthropology Review Database

Writing of Ranongga Island, the author tracks engagements with foreigners across many realms of life, describing startling reversals in which strangers become attached to local places, even as kinspeople are estranged. Against stereotypes of rural insularity, she argues that a distinctive cosmopolitan openness to others is evident in the rural Solomons in times of war and peace.

Living Kinship in the Pacific
Edited by Christina Toren and Simonne Pauwels

“...a collection of high-quality research articles whose foci coincide to a remarkable degree... [that] will be of lasting value to scholars of the region for years to come—because knowledge of kinship will be knowledge that counts for a long time to come.” - The Asia Pacific Journal of Anthropology

Focusing on transformation and continuity over time in Fiji, Tonga, and Samoa, among others, contributors assert that kinship is a lived and living dimension of contemporary human lives. The ethnographic case studies add to the understanding of kinship as — according to Unaisi Nabobo-Baba — “knowledge that counts.”

Christina Toren is Professor of Anthropology and founding Director of the Centre for Pacific Studies at the University of St Andrews.

In the Absence of the Gift
New Forms of Value and Personhood in a Papua New Guinea Community
Anders Emil Rasmussen

“In the Absence of the Gift masterfully integrates a number of issues and practices—remittances, marketing and debt, community development projects, and collective activities like canoe-building—that might at first glance appear unrelated. Rasmussen embraces them all under the rubric of ‘seeing’ and making relations, and he illustrates how new social concepts like ‘debt’ or ‘community’ continue to operate within traditional understandings of obligation, generosity, and selfishness.” - Anthropology Review Database

Nearly half the people born on the remote Mbuke Islands become teachers, businessmen, or bureaucrats in urban centers, while those who stay at home ask migrant relatives “What about me?” This detailed ethnography sheds light on remittance motivations and documents how terms like “community” can be useful in places otherwise permeated by kinship.

Anders Emil Rasmussen is Curator and Researcher at the Vejle Museums (Denmark).

The Ethnographic Experiment
A.M. Hocart and W.H.R. Rivers in Island Melanesia, 1908
Edited by Edvard Hviding and Cato Berg

“[With this] very cohesive set of essays, Hviding and Berg have done an excellent job lifting an important expedition out of the archival oblivion where it reposed for the better part of a century.” - Oceania

In 1908 Arthur Maurice Hocart and William Halse Rivers brought about a turning point in modern anthropology. The two pioneers’ fieldwork in Island Melanesia brought about the development of participant observation as a methodological hallmark of social anthropology. Contributors to this volume—who have all carried out fieldwork in Melanesian locations—situate the scholars’ efforts in the contexts of colonial history, imperialism, the history of ideas and scholarly practice within and beyond anthropology.

Edvard Hviding is Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Bergen.

Cato Berg is an Associate Senior Scholar of the Bergen Pacific Studies Research Group.

Belonging in Oceania
Movement, Place-Making and Multiple Identifications
Edited by Elfriede Hermann, Wolfgang Kempf and Toon van Meijl

“This interesting book contributes to notions of identity in the context of displacement or migration. Specifically, it engages with the dynamics and uncertainties that arise with movement away from home and the inevitable encounters between different cultural contexts that occur through such movement...” - Asian and Pacific Migration Journal

Belonging can be understood by considering the intersections of movement, place-making and cultural identifications. The contributions present ethnographic case studies of such intersections in Oceania. Investigated are ongoing formations of place, self and community in connection with travelling, as well as with internal and international migration.

Elfriede Hermann is Professor at the Institute of Cultural and Social Anthropology at the University of Göttingen.

Wolfgang Kempf is a Researcher at the Institute of Cultural and Social Anthropology at the University of Göttingen.

Toon van Meijl is Professor of Anthropology and Head of the Department of Anthropology and Development Studies at Radboud University Nijmegen in the Netherlands.

The Agendas of Tibetan Refugees
Survival Strategies of a Government-in-Exile in a World of Transnational Organizations
Thomas Kauffmann

“Kauffmann has made an important contribution to scholarship on the transnational sphere of international development as it concerns Tibetans. This book, which aims to give readers the Tibetan perspective on the phenomenon, is an essential update to previous works on the subject.” · Julia Hess, University of New Mexico

“The way in which Tibetan religion has been essentialized, commodified, and instrumentalized [in this book] is really very good indeed . . . The description and discussion of the Tibet movement . . . is first-rate.” · David N. Gellner, Oxford University

Since the arrival of the first Tibetans in exile in 1959, a vast and continuous wave of international support has permitted these refugees to survive and even to flourish in temporary residences. This book shows how Tibetan refugees continue to attract resources, while other refugee populations are largely forgotten.

Thomas Kauffmann is the Director of an International NGO and holds a Doctorate in Anthropology from the University of Oxford.

Wind Over Water
Migration in an East Asian Context
Edited by David W. Haines, Keiko Yamanaka, and Shinji Yamashita

“...this book is a worthy addition to migration research and Asian studies. It is warmly recommended to scholars, advanced graduate students, and anyone else interested in people on the move in Asia and beyond.” · Journal of Royal Anthropological Institute

Illuminating the ways in which an Asian-based analysis of migration can yield new data on global migration patterns, the contributors provide important new theoretical insights for a broader understanding of global migration, and innovative methodological approaches to the spatial and temporal complexity of human migration.

David W. Haines is Professor of Anthropology at George Mason University.

Keiko Yamanaka is Continuing Lecturer in the Departments of Ethnic Studies and International and Area Studies at the University of California, Berkeley.

Shinji Yamashita is Professor of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Tokyo.

Fertility and Procreative Technologies in India
Aditya Bharadwaj

“...this is a much needed, eagerly anticipated and important book for those scholars who work within the broad field of social studies of reproduction, and specifically for those who study assisted reproductive technologies.” - Ayo Wahlberg, University of Copenhagen

The book examines the causes and consequences of infertility and the rapid proliferation of new reproductive technologies in ‘modern India’. The book emerges from an ethnographic inquiry that explains how assisted conception, as a means of bypassing infertility, is being accommodated, understood and used in India today.

Aditya Bharadwaj is Research Professor at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva.

Thai in Vitro
Gender, Culture and Assisted Reproduction
Andrea Whittaker

“...an important contribution to the growing field of social studies of infertility treatment ... Assisted reproductive technologies (ARTs) are now routine throughout the world, and it is crucial that we learn more about how they gain a foothold in particular countries.” - Ayo Wahlberg, University of Copenhagen

In Thailand, infertility remains a source of stigma for those couples that combine a range of religious, traditional and high-tech interventions in their quest for a child. This book explores this experience of infertility and the pursuit and use of assisted reproductive technologies by Thai couples. Though using assisted reproductive technologies is becoming more acceptable in Thai society, access to and choices about such technologies are mediated by differences in class position. These stories of women and men in private and public infertility clinics reveal how local social and moral sensitivities influence the practices and meanings of treatment.

Andrea Whittaker is an ARC Future Fellow and Convenor of Anthropology at Monash University.

Reluctant Intimacies
Japanese Eldercare in Indonesian Hands
Beata Świtek

“This study is based on in-depth research involving a good analysis of the articulation of national identities, sense of belonging and local labour markets with the social and bodily intimacies related to care for the elderly in Japanese institutions... It is an essential contribution to the understanding of the cultural, personal and social relations in care work.” - Ratna Saptari, Leiden University

Based on seventeen months of ethnographic research among Indonesian eldercare workers in Japan, this book is the first ethnography to research Indonesian care workers’ relationships with the cared-for elderly, their Japanese colleagues and their employers.

Beata Świtek, PhD, University College London, is a Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology in Halle, Germany.

Ritual Retellings
Luangan Healing Performances through Practice
Isabell Herrmans

“Of particular value is Herrmans’s analysis of the subject matter from a multidimensional perspective by integrating various theoretical trends and concepts...The greatest strength of this volume is its captivating and vivid ethnographic description and meticulous documentation of situationally emerging ritual performances, entwined with the life stories of the particular people who were involved in them through which the ethnographic scene is brought ‘alive’ for the reader.” - The Asia Pacific Journal of Anthropology

The book is an ethnography of belian, a lively tradition of shamanistic curing rituals performed by the Luangans of Indonesian Borneo. This volume demonstrates the importance of understanding rituals as emergent within their specific historical and social settings, and highlights the irreducibility of lived reality to epistemological certainty.

Isabell Herrmans is a Post-Doctoral Researcher in Social and Cultural Anthropology at the University of Helsinki.

‘City of the Future’
Built Space, Modernity and Urban Change in Astana
Mateusz Laszczkowski

“City of the Future’ is the first of its kind. As a long-awaited comprehensive account of the rise of Astana... it is a remarkably thoughtful and thought-provoking book. Laszczkowski is a skilled ethnographer and he recounts his rich and insightful research in a style that captivates and challenges readers to think outside the box.” — Natalie Koch, University of Syracuse

The long-awaited comprehensive account of the rise of Astana, the capital city of Kazakhstan, this book argues for an understanding of space as inextricably material-and-imaginary, and unceasingly dynamic – allowing for a plurality of incompatible pasts and futures materialized in spatial form.

Mateusz Laszczkowski is Assistant Professor at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology, at the University of Warsaw, Poland.

Death of the Public University?
Uncertain Futures for Higher Education in the Knowledge Economy
Edited by Susan Wright and Cris Shore

“The book is a challenging approach to higher education studies and beyond. Dynamically questioning the relationship between the university and the dominant political economy at present, this book assumes a multidisciplinary approach and brings together macro and micro level analyses allowing the transformations in contemporary higher education to be mapped.” — António M. Magalhães, University of Porto

Continuous government reforms to make universities ‘world class’, entrepreneurial and drivers of the knowledge economy, are transforming the traditional mission and meaning of the public university and its ability to act as ‘critic and conscience’ of society. This collection explores the new landscapes of higher education emerging across Europe and Australasia.

Hindi Is Our Ground, English Is Our Sky
Education, Language, and Social Class in Contemporary India
Chaise LaDousa

“[This book] is a much needed study of the situation in the field at root level... [It] allows the reader to grasp the complexity of the language question that applies to the entire country by the author’s focus on the complexity of one of India’s urban centers.” — New Books Asia

Schools are institutions on which class mobility depends, and they are divided by Hindi and English in the rubric of “medium,” the primary language of pedagogy. This book demonstrates that the school division allows for different visions of what it means to belong to the nation and what is central and peripheral in the nation. It also shows how the language-medium division reverberates unevenly and unequally through the nation, and that schools illustrate the tensions brought on by economic liberalization and middle-class status.

Foucault’s Orient
The Conundrum of Cultural Difference, From Tunisia to Japan
Marnia Lazreg

“This is a serious and pivotal book that shows the limits of Foucault’s rejection of universalism and humanism. Lazreg’s book allows us to re-read Foucault within his boundaries.” - Massimiliano Tomba, University of Padua

Using interviews with scholars from Tunisia and Japan, this book examines the manner in which Foucault experienced and explained his encounters with non-Western cultures, unraveling the anthropological implications of his unwavering commitment to cultural difference. It also traces the philosophical-theoretical sources of his conception of difference, and uncovers the contradictions of his dismissal of empirical anthropology to know human beings.

New Hong Kong Cinema
Transitions to Becoming Chinese in 21st-Century East Asia
Ruby Cheung

“Cheung successfully conveys the complex and mutable terrain of contemporary Hong Kong cinema, then and now.” - Film Quarterly

“...contextualising these films and filmmakers, New Hong Kong Cinema offers a relevant and insightful reconsideration of contemporary Hong Kong films. Simultaneously, it opens up the possibility for comparative studies.” - New Books Asia

The trajectory of Hong Kong films had been drastically affected long before the city’s official sovereignty transfer from the British to the Chinese in 1997. The author introduces the “Cinema of Transitions,” using examples from the 1980s to the present, to study New Hong Kong Cinema and on- and off-screen life against this background.

Languid Bodies, Grounded Stances
The Curving Pathway of Neoclassical Odissi Dance
Nandini Sikand

“Through its study of an underexplored style of Indian dance and performance, this book adds to the new well-established field of how colonial and nationalist politics have reshaped the arts in India. What is especially welcome is that it adds to the less developed field of how one might integrate the historical narrative with aesthetic concepts embedded in performing arts practice, thus expanding the possibilities of social science methodology.” - Kalpana Ram, Macquarie University

Odissi dance has transformed over the centuries from an Indian temple ritual to a transnational genre performed—and consumed—throughout the world. Building on ethnographic research in multiple locations, this book reveals the complexity of odissi as it is practiced today, at the intersection of identity, nationalism, tradition, and neoliberal economics.

Nandini Sikand is an odissi dancer, filmmaker, and anthropologist.

Legacies of Violence
Rendering the Unspeakable Past in Modern Australia
Edited by Robert Mason

“The contributions to Legacies of Violence represent a compelling effort to use violence as a framework for understanding the interconnectedness of issues like whiteness and the state. This collection makes an important contribution to our historical understanding of Australian history, and to the history of violence, race, gender, and sexuality.” — Gregory Smithers, Virginia Commonwealth University

Whether in the form of warfare, forced migration, or social prejudice, Australia’s sense of nationhood was born from experiences of violence. Legacies of Violence probes this brutal legacy through case studies that range from the colonial frontier to modern domestic spaces, exploring empathy, isolation, and Australians’ imagined place in the world.

Beyond Alterity
German Encounters with Modern East Asia
Edited by Qinna Shen and Martin Rosenstock

This collection of essays examines German-language cultural production pertaining to modern China and Japan, and explicitly challenges orientalist notions by proposing a conception of East and West not as opposites, but as complementary elements of global culture, thereby urging a move beyond national paradigms in cultural studies. Essays focus on the mid-century German-Japanese alliance, Chinese-German Leftist collaborations, global capitalism, travel, identity, and cultural hybridity. The authors include historians and scholars of film and literature, and employ a wide array of approaches from postcolonial, globalization, media, and gender studies. The collection sheds new light on a complex and ambivalent set of international relationships, while also testifying to the potential of Asian German Studies.

Qinna Shen is Visiting Assistant Professor of German at Miami University in Ohio.

Martin Rosenstock is Assistant Professor of German at Gulf University for Science and Technology in Kuwait.
