Coming of Age

Constructing and Controlling Youth in Munich, 1942-1973

Martin Kalb, Bridgewater College

“Employing a ‘top-down’ approach and utilizing an impressive array of archival sources, contemporary periodicals, and oral histories, Kalb’s work does a remarkable job of balancing the views of authority figures and young people... Highly recommended.” · Choice

In the years following World War II, Munich society became obsessed with the hypothetical threat that youths posed to postwar stability. This fascinating study shows that constructs like the rowdy young male and the sexually deviant girl served as proxies for the anxieties of adult society, while allowing authorities to expand social control.

Comic Books and Contested Power in the German Democratic Republic
Sean Eedy, Carleton University in Ottawa

Comics were employed as extensions of the regime’s educational system, delivering state ideology to develop the socialist personality among youth. The East German children who avidly read these comics, however, found their own meanings and projected their own desires in them.

Back to the Postindustrial Future
An Ethnography of Germany’s Fastest-Shrinking City
Felix Ringel, Durham University

“This work speaks strongly to American Rust Belt cities and other sites of profound change in its methods, theory, and data, and should inspire further dialogues about anthropological knowledge as well the possibilities of urban action.” · Choice

This volume is the first comprehensive ethnography of the future, approaching Hoyerswerda, Germany’s fastest shrinking city, not from the perspective of its past, but persistently from that of its future. Through an extensive ethnography of the city, it allows us to investigate the postindustrial era and the futures it has supposedly lost.

Narratives in the Making
Writing the East German Past in the Democratic Present
Anselma Gallinat, Newcastle University

“...The book succeeds as a carefully designed, balanced, and executed study, providing convincing evidence from multiple memory intermediaries.” · American Historical Review

This ethnography studies two very different institutions in one eastern German state taking divergent approaches to the past. While government organizations reliably depict the GDR as a dictatorship, one major regional newspaper focuses on the experiences and concerns of its readers—“memory work” that inevitably shapes citizenship and democracy.
