This collection has grown out of a series of activities in and around the DELTA Project at the University of Cologne, Germany, funded by the German Research Foundation's (DFG) Emmy Noether Programme (project number 276392588). Since 2016, discussions around Anthropology of and for River Deltas and Research Methods for Volatile Lifeworlds in the Hydrosocial Anthropocene provided productive contexts in which to develop some of the ideas and exchange some of the findings presented in this book. Conversations on River Deltas as Living Landscapes: Movement, Management, and the Critique of a Commonplace, facilitated by Tanya Richardson and Franz Krause, and a discussion of Amphibious Dwelling: Exploring Life between Wet and Dry, chaired by Franz Krause and Mark Harris, helped us to elaborate the arguments. We are grateful to three anonymous reviewers who have helped us to clarify our argument. Special thanks go to Teresa Cremer for support with research and manuscript compilation and to P.X. Amphlett for superb copy-editing.
