

Contents

List of Illustrations	vii
Preface	x
Introduction. The (Bio)Archaeology of Adolescence Creighton Avery and Dana Thacher	1
Chapter 1. Adolescence in the European Upper Paleolithic: Are There Temporal and Spatial Trends? Jennifer French and April Nowell	11
Chapter 2. From Childhood to Adulthood in Iberia During the Bell Beaker Period (2500–2000 cal. BC) Ana M. Herrero Corral	34
Chapter 3. A Tale of Two Cities: Exploring the Biological and Social Transformations of Adolescence in the Roman Empire Creighton Avery	50
Chapter 4. Being and Becoming: The Archaeology of Adolescence in the Ancient Andes Sarah I. Baitzel, Bridget C. Bey, and Allisen C. Dahlstedt	70
Chapter 5. Viking Age Adolescence: An Osteoarchaeological Assessment of Puberty in a Gotlandic Viking Age Community Marieke Ivarsson-Aalders	91
Chapter 6. Crime, Punishment, and Adolescent Wrongdoers in Early Medieval England Dawn Hadley	113
Chapter 7. The Body and Gendered Ideology as Expressed Through Adolescent Commemoration in Victorian and Edwardian England Dana Thacher	128

Chapter 8. Transitional Youths: Defining “Adolescence” in Nineteenth-Century New York City Through Skeletal Remains Meredith Ellis	147
Conclusion. The (Bio)Archaeology of Adolescence: Challenges and Opportunities Kathryn Kamp	164
Final Remarks	177
Index	180