

Contents

Acknowledgments	viii
Introduction. Leonidas Moiras and Nikos Christofis	1
Part I. Historiographical Approaches of the Greek Revolution
Chapter 1. Ottoman and Turkish Perceptions of the Greek Revolution and Greek Irredentism Leonidas Moiras and Alexandros Lamprou	25
Chapter 2. Cyprus and the Greek Revolution of 1821: Narrating and Constructing the Past Nikos Christofis	52
Chapter 3. Albanian National Narratives and “Interbalkanism(s)”: Centers and Visions of the “Greek” in the Nineteenth Century Elias G. Skoulidas	76
Chapter 4. The Question of the Elites in the Historiography of the 1821 Greek Revolution Dimitris Stamatopoulos	95

Part II. The Greek Revolution in the Ottoman Context

Chapter 5.

- The Greek Independence War, Ottoman Citizenship, and Military Conscription: The Story of a Vicious Circle 115
Erik-Jan Zürcher

Chapter 6.

- From the Nile to Navarino: The Greek Revolution in the Egyptian Historiography 127
Panos Kourgiotis

Chapter 7.

- Across the Aegean: Muslim Migration from the Morea during the Greek War of Independence 148
Hilal Cemile Tümer

Part III. The Global Impact of the Greek Revolution

Chapter 8.

- American Protestant Missionaries and the Greek Revolution 169
Elmira Vassileva

Chapter 9.

- Russian Liberalism, the Revolutions of the 1820s, and the Greek
Revolution of 1821 189
Ada Dialla

Chapter 10.

- The Greeks and Transnational Political Policing in Europe during the Age of Revolutions 209
Christos Aliprantis

Chapter 11.

- The Ottoman–Iranian Enmity and the Greek War of Independence 232
S. Mohammed T. Shariat-Panahi

Chapter 12.

- “Every Single Verse Seems to Be Speaking to the Contemporary Chinese”: Perceptions of the Greek Revolution of 1821 in Japan and China 260
Egas Bender de Moniz Bandeira

Afterword.

A '1619 Project' for Greece

282

Christine Philiou

Index

292