

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	vii
Acknowledgments	x
Introduction. Entertaining German Culture? Stephan Ehrig, Benjamin Schaper, and Elizabeth Ward	1
Part I. Transculturating Screen(ed) Heritage
Chapter 1. The New German Television and the Newer German Film: A History of Industry Disruption and Synergy Randall Halle	39
Chapter 2. Reenacting Propaganda: Quentin Tarantino's Inglourious Basterds and the Anti-Nazi War Film A. Dana Weber	66
Chapter 3. From Shakespeare to Goethe: German Golden Age Literature and Silver Screen Literacy in Trans/national Times Bridget Levine-West	97
Part II. Transnational Streaming Ambitions
Chapter 4. Deterritorializing the Stasi in Deutschland 83/86/89 Elizabeth Ward	127
Chapter 5. History in the Mainstream: Charité Carol Anne Costabile-Heming	151
Chapter 6. Mapping Berlin: Space, Trauma, and Transnationalism in Dominik Graf's Im Angesicht des Verbrechens and the Wachowskis' Sense8 Felipe Espinoza Garrido	172

Part III. The Transnationalization of German Cultural History

Chapter 7.	Producing Denationalizing Television: The Netflixization of the New Berlin City Genre in Dogs of Berlin Benjamin Nickl	205
Chapter 8.	Now Mainstreaming: Queer Phenomenology, Techno, and the Transnational in Beat and Futur Drei Tom Smith	232
Chapter 9.	Looking into the Abyss: The Transnational Puzzle in Dark Lorena Silos Ribas	259
	Filmography	283
	Index	290