

---

Contents

List of Illustrations	vi
Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xii
Note on Orthography	xiv
Introduction. Nature Beyond the ‘Ontological Turn’	1
Chapter 1. What Black Elk Left Unsaid	28
Chapter 2. Comparative Natures in Melanesia	40
Chapter 3. Political Contingency, Historical Ecology and the Renegotiation of Nature	53
Appendix: The Consequences of Deforestation – A Nuaulu Text from Rouhua Seram 1994	72
Chapter 4. Indigenous Environmental Knowledge and Its Transformations	76
Chapter 5. From Ethno-science to Science	103
Chapter 6. Local and Scientific Understandings of Forest Diversity	135
Chapter 7. Why Aren’t the Nuaulu Like the Matsigenka?	161
Chapter 8. Roots, Shoots and Leaves: The Art of Weeding	183
Chapter 9. Tools, Agency and the Category of ‘Living Things’	199
Chapter 10. Is There a Role for Ontologies in Understanding Plant Knowledge Systems?	224
References	244
Index	277