

Contents

List of Illustrations	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction Heritage under Socialism: Trajectories of Preserving the Tangible Past in Postwar Eastern and Central Europe Corinne Geering and Paul Vickers	1

Part I. Transfers and Exchanges in Heritage Policies and Practices

Chapter 1 The Past Belongs to the Future: Heritage in Soviet Policymaking on Cultural Development Corinne Geering	35
Chapter 2 International Experts—National Martyrdom—Socialist Heritage: The Contribution of the Polish People’s Republic to the Early UNESCO World Heritage Program Julia Röttjer	56
Chapter 3 International Tourism and the Making of the National Heritage Canon in Late Soviet Ukraine, 1964–1991 Iryna Sklokina	78
Chapter 4 International Contacts and Cooperation in Heritage Preservation in Soviet Estonia, 1960–1990 Karin Hallas-Murula and Kaarel Truu	105

Part II. Canonizing and Contesting the Past: Heritage, Place, and Belonging under Socialism

Chapter 5 Socialist Royalty? The Ambiguities of the Reconstruction of the Royal Residence in Budapest in the 1950s Eszter Gantner	127
Chapter 6 Justifying Demolition, Questioning Value: Urban Typologies and the Concept of the “Historic Town” in 1960s Romania Liliana Iuga	145

Chapter 7 Making Sense of Socialism through Heritage Preservation: Stories from Northwest Bohemia Čeněk Pýcha	169
Chapter 8 Socialism and the Rise of Industrial Heritage: The Preservation of Industrial Monuments in the German Democratic Republic Nele-Hendrikje Lehmann	195
Conclusion Transnational Heritage Networks in Socialist Eastern and Central Europe Corinne Geering	217
Index	237