

Contents

Introduction	1
Mariusz Kalczewiak and Magdalena Kozłowska

Part I. Affirming and Contesting the Empire

Chapter 1 Constructing Aziatchina : An Apology for Perceived Own “Emptiness” in Russian National and Imperial Discourses, 1828–1918	21
Batir Xasanov

Chapter 2 Involuntary Orientalists: Polish Exiles and Adventurers as Observers of the Kazakh Steppe and the Caucasus	44
Curtis G. Murphy

Chapter 3 “These Sufferers, Constantly Lamenting Their Bitter Fate”: The Image of the Mountain Jews in the Writings of Joseph Judah Chorny and Ilya Anisimov	69
Mateusz Majman

Part II. Creating the Other: Travel and Migration

Chapter 4 The East-West Dichotomy Disrupted: Triangulation and Reflections on the Imperial View in Hungarian Perceptions of North America	97
Balázs Venkovits

Chapter 5 Negotiating Empires: Eastern European Jewish Responses to the Expulsion of Jews from Palestine to Egypt in 1914–15	120
Jonathan Hirsch

Chapter 6 From Exotic Adventure to Victimization to Estrangement: Imagining “Africa” through the Eyes of Czechoslovak Travel Writers (1950s–80s)	144
Barbora Buzássyová

Part III. Representations and Fantasies

Chapter 7 Land Flowing with Milk and Honey: Polish Maritime and River/Colonial League's Depictions of South America Marta Grzechnik	173
Chapter 8 Between Postimperial Expansion and Promethean Mission: Africa and Africans in Interwar Polish Colonial Discourse Piotr Puchalski	196
Chapter 9 Eastern Promises: Romanian Responses to the War in Vietnam Jill Massino	221
Afterword Magdalena Kozłowska and Mariusz Kalczewiak	243
Index	249