

Contents

List of Figures	vii
Preface	viii
List of Abbreviations	x
INTRODUCTION Why Do Concepts Matter in Science Policy? Désirée Schauz and David Kaldemey	1
Part I. Genealogies of Science Policy Discourses
CHAPTER 1 Categorizing Science in Nineteenth and Early Twentieth-Century Britain Robert Bud	35
CHAPTER 2 Professional Devotion, National Needs, Fascist Claims, and Democratic Virtues: The Language of Science Policy in Germany Désirée Schauz and Gregor Lax	64
CHAPTER 3 Transforming Pure Science into Basic Research: The Language of Science Policy in the United States David Kaldemey and Désirée Schauz	104
Part II. Conceptual Synchronization and Cultural Variation
CHAPTER 4 Fundamental Research and New Scientific Arrangements for the Development of Britain's Colonies after 1940 Sabine Clarke	143
CHAPTER 5 Basic Research in the Max Planck Society: Science Policy in the Federal Republic of Germany, 1945–1970 Carola Sachse	163

CHAPTER 6 Beyond the Basic/Applied Distinction? The Scientific-Technological Revolution in the German Democratic Republic, 1945–1989 Manuel Schramm	187
CHAPTER 7 Applied Science in Stalin’s Time: Hungary, 1945–1953 György Péteri	205
CHAPTER 8 Theory Attached to Practice: Chinese Debates over Basic Research from Thought Remolding to the Bomb, 1949–1966 Zuoyue Wang	228
 Part III. Outlook
CHAPTER 9 The Language of Science Policy in the Twenty-First Century: What Comes after Basic and Applied Research? Tim Flink and David Kaldewey	251
Indexes	285