

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	viii
Preface	x
List of Abbreviations	xii
Introduction	1
Arguments Presented in This Study	3
Notes on Methodology	6
Analyzing the History of Futures: A Survey of Historical Scholarship	10
Structure of the Book	16
Sources	17
Chapter 1. Roots in the Early Twentieth Century	25
From Prophecy to Prognostics	25
The Future as a Literary Genre	29
The Rise of “High Modernist” Political Planning	30
The Catalytic Role of Planning in World War II	35
Concluding Remarks	37
Chapter 2. Cold War Science	43
Big Science and Technological Cultures	44
RAND, Cybernetics, and Game Theory: Providing the Theories	49
Simulation Modeling, Scenario Writing, and Delphi: Developing Forecasting Techniques	55
Transatlantic Platforms and Cold War Spearheads: The Congress for Cultural Freedom and the Ford Foundation	63
French Connection: The Ford Foundation, Planification , and the Founding of Futuribles	67
Scientific Forecasting and Futurology in the Socialist States	75
Concluding Remarks	89
Chapter 3. Conceptualizing Futures Studies: Key Figures and Thought Styles	101
Normative Style of Thought: Bertrand de Jouvenel and Carl Friedrich von Weizsäcker	102

Shaping Tomorrow's World
A Twentieth-Century History of West German, Cold War, and Global Futures Studies

Elke Seefried

<https://www.berghahnbooks.com/title/SeefriedShaping>

Not for resale

Empirical and Positivistic Style of Thought: Daniel Bell, Olaf Helmer, Herman Kahn, and Karl Steinbuch	120
Critical and Emancipatory Style of Thought: Robert Jungk and Ossip K. Flechtheim	154
Chapter 4. Constructing Futurology? The Emerging Futures Field and the Public Sphere	203
Science and the Public Sphere	203
Futures Studies and a Changing Science–Media–Public Nexus since the 1950s	205
Concluding Remarks	219
Chapter 5. Conflicting Futures: Setting Up West German Futures Studies Organizations	225
Peace Studies and Futures Studies: The Founding of the Max Planck Institute in Starnberg	226
Systems Analysis between Planning and Participation: The Studiengruppe für Systemforschung (SfS)	237
Systems, Models, Learning: The Berlin Center for Futures Research (ZBZ)	244
Ideologized Futures in Conflict: The Gesellschaft für Zukunftsfragen (GfZ)	257
Chapter 6. Building Bridges: Mankind 2000 and the Founding of the World Future(s) Studies Federation	285
Peace Movements and Futures Studies	287
On the Path to Oslo	292
Technological Optimism and a Spirit of Feasibility: The Oslo Congress, 1967	298
A Look-Out Agency for Europe?	304
From High-Tech Visions to World Futures: The International Future Research Conference, Kyoto, 1970	306
Cold War Détente Encounters in Bucharest and the Founding of the WFSF	320
Concluding Remarks	326
Chapter 7. Controlling the World’s Future: The Early History of the Club of Rome	339
The OECD Nucleus of the Club	340
Aurelio Peccei, IIASA, and the Founding of the Club of Rome	345
The Bellagio Conference, 1968	353

An Elitist Circle: The Club of Rome and Its First “Project 1970”	354
Concluding Remarks	357
Chapter 8. The Environmental Turn in Futures Studies: The Debate about The Limits to Growth, 1972–73	363
An Environmental Revolution around 1970?	364
The Limits to Growth Study, 1972	371
The Debate on The Limits to Growth Study	375
Effects of The Limits to Growth Debate on the Futures Field and Beyond	387
Concluding Remarks	391
Chapter 9. Glocalization and a Subjective Turn: Futures Studies in the 1970s	403
Human-Centered Futures: The 1973 Rome Conference of the WFSF	404
Shaping the Future from the Bottom Up and Globally: Dubrovnik, Berlin, and the Concept of Future Workshops in the 1970s	414
Modeling the World’s Future: The Club of Rome and IIASA in the Mid-1970s	419
Global and Local Futures: Rethinking and Practicing Futures Studies in 1970s West Germany	425
Concluding Remarks	436
Chapter 10. Global Solidarity versus Economic Competitiveness: The Futures Field from the 1970s Onward	447
Closing Doors: West German Futures Studies Institutions in the late 1970s and 1980s	448
The WFSF between World Order and Utopia	458
An Economic Turn in Futures Studies?	465
Concluding Remarks	473
Conclusion	483
Bibliography	493
Index	567