

Contents

List of Figures	vii
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction. Media and Their Users in Nazi Germany Ulrike Weckel	1
1. “To Constantly Swim against the Tide Is Suicide”: The Liberal Press and Its Audience, 1928–33 Jochen Hung	48
2. Active Audiences: Stürmerkästen and the Rise of Der Stürmer’s Activist Readership Hannah Ahlheim	61
3. Reading Fake News: The “Röhm Putsch,” the Hitler Myth, and the Consumption of Political News under the Nazis Janosch Steuwer	84
4. Beyond Approved Reactions: Assessments of the NSDAP’s Nuremberg Party Rallies in Diaries and Letters, 1933–38 Annina Hofferberth	104
5. Call and Response: The Creation of the National Socialist Public Peter Fritzsche	121
6. Advertising and Its Audiences in Weimar and Nazi Germany Pamela E. Swett	136
7. Concert Programs, Ideology, and the Search for Subjectivity in National Socialist Germany Neil Gregor	154

8. The “ Entartete Kunst ” Exhibitions and Their Audiences Bernhard Fulda	177
9. Amateur Films from National Socialist Austria as Visual Responses to Nazi Propaganda Michaela Scharf	196
10. The Media of Occupation: German Books and Photographs in France, 1940–44 Julia S. Torrie	219
11. The Migration of Topoi from Atrocity Films to Their Heirs: Modes of Addressing the Audience in German Postwar Cinema Bernhard Gross	240
12. Finding an Unintended Audience: An SS Photo Album and Its Postwar Editions Ulrike Koppermann	262
Postscript Jane Caplan	283
Index	286