

American Students at the University of Leipzig, 1781-1914

Compiled by Anja Werner, anja.werner@ymail.com

Last updated on June 5, 2013.

This alphabetical list was taken from the register of the University of Leipzig, which is preserved at the Leipzig University Archives (LUA). It contains the names and registration information of American students between 1781 and 1914. Included are hearers and visitors who were traced in secondary sources, foreigners who were traced as regular students, and women whose names were found in the Leipzig hearer list, in the folders on female students, and in secondary sources. Some entries contain cross-references to other Leipzig-Americans and to Halle-Americans to highlight networking connections. The names that women acquired through marriage are added in square brackets; for the most part, women are listed under their maiden names. Biographical Information was added when available; abbreviated references refer to the bibliography (see also below) and list of dissertations of Leipzig Americans in the Transatlantic World of Higher Education. Dissertations typically contain brief vitas. Entries appear as they were, that is, as a mixture of German and English. Obvious spelling mistakes were corrected, information to some extent standardized, and contradictory additional information added in square brackets. In cases when students registered more than once, the information was molded into one entry.

language and literature Leipzig, 1892 Prof Engl Philology Stanford. Three generations of

Flügel's played an important role in Leipzig-American networking: Johann Gottfried Flügel

(1788-1855) traveled in the US between 1810-1819, since 1824 he taught English at Leipzig

University, and since 1838 he served as American Consul in Leipzig (1839-1855). He started a German-English dictionary that was continued by his son, Karl Alfred Felix Flügel (1820-1904), and saw several editions until the early 20th century. Felix Flügel himself acted as American Vice Consul in Leipzig from June 1855 to June 1856. The dictionary first appeared in 1830. Gottfried Hermann, the Leipzig Greek scholar in the first half of the 19th century, wrote a preface to the 1843 edition of the dictionary. Both J. G. and F. Flügel collaborated with the Smithsonian Institution. Brüning, 7-11; Brüning, Das Konsulat der Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika zu Leipzig.
